leisurely round of golf at the course just south of Macklin, Sask. combined with a cold pop, time away from school books—and an electric cart, what more could these three girls want? Certainly not boys. At least maybe not for a few more years.

©PROVOST NEWS PHOTO.

Fran McNalley, who lives south of Czar takes advantage of a recycling bin in the village. She throws the last of several items into the bin including milk cartons, cardboard and old newspapers. ©PROVOST NEWS PHOTO.

Darrell Katchmar with blower (left) of Hardisty and Dean Holte of Hughenden clear the track of debris from the main line of the Canadian Pacific railway at 10:24 a.m. ©PROVOST NEWS PHOTO.

CMP officer Karen Ryder wheeled into the parking lot with her police cruiser after curiosity got the better of her at 8:25 p.m. She spotted a couple of dozen men standing around in dark suits carrying strange black cases. They weren't the Mafia. They were the Masons. Ryder is shown talking to Jim Chesterman who was later sworn in as master of the Edgerton Masonic Lodge. Provost Masons hosted the event following a supper. Provost master Don Hawken (extreme right), kept his position for another one year term as did other officers of the local lodge. ©Provost News Photo.

